

Cover
Editor
Features
Dribbles
Drabbles
Art
Anthology
Outreach
Submissions
Contact
Archive

The Dribble Drabble Review

Little-ature in 50 (a Dribble) & 100 (a Drabble) Words

DRIBBLES

The hierarchy of fiction goes something like this: epic (120,000 words and up), novel (40,000 - 120,000), novella (17,500 - 40,000), novelette (7,500 - 17,500), short story (1,500 - 7,500), sudden fiction (750), flash fiction (300 - 1,500), micro fiction (under 300), a drabble (exactly 100), and a dribble (exactly 50). Our 4th Issue Dribbles follow; page through using the slide buttons below. Authors are alphabetized.

Evening Doubt

When I saw the moon's gold circle in the sky, I wondered whether to relish its perfection. Much on our Earth is flawed; it almost seemed foolish to dwell on a distant ideal. But the sight overhead offered a reprieve from worry, and I didn't think that wise to question.

— Norbert Kovacs, USA

Norbert Kovacs lives and writes in Hartford, Connecticut. He has published stories in Headway, Abstract, Hypnopomp, Corvus Review, and The Write Launch.

His webs < www.norbertkovacs.net.

 Let's Chat!