

Pink Shell

Her husband had put the skinny, pink shell on their sale table. Before they married, she'd given it to him on a lonesome beach. She looked so beautiful that night, he had said and promised to keep the shell always. Now she pocketed the small thing and considered whether to tell him that she had.

Norbert Kovacs